

Atlanta Workshop on Public Policy and Child Well-Being (PPCW)

March 10-11, 2023

Atlanta, GA

Organizers:

Lindsey Rose Bullinger, Ph.D.

Daniel Dench, Ph.D.

Call for Papers:

The Atlanta Workshop on Public Policy and Child Well-being (PPCW) will bring together an interdisciplinary group of scholars focusing on questions related to the health and well-being of children. The purpose of the workshop is to provide a platform for researchers who seek to better understand the factors affecting child well-being, broadly defined. The workshop will include presentations of policy-relevant empirical research—from any discipline—related to children.

Topics of interest include (but are not limited to):

- Prevention of adverse childhood experiences
- Promotion of child well-being
- Child welfare
- Child health
- Parenting behaviors
- Pregnancy-related and birth outcomes
- Food insecurity
- Housing insecurity
- Education
- Immigration
- Juvenile justice involvement

The keynote will be delivered by Lisa A. Gennetian, Pritzker Professor of Early Learning Policy Studies in the Sanford School of Public Policy at Duke University.

Please visit the workshop website: <https://www.lindseybullinger.com/workshop> or use the link here to submit your paper in PDF format by December 15, 2022. Papers should include an abstract and should not yet be published. Authors of accepted papers will be notified by January 10, 2023.

Authors of accepted papers are expected to participate in the entire 2-day workshop. More information about the venue and accommodation will be provided once the program is finalized. Lunches and a group dinner will be provided. Limited funds are available to assist in covering the travel expenses for Ph.D. students.

This workshop is generously sponsored by the School of Public Policy, the School of Economics, and the Ivan Allen College of Liberal Arts at Georgia Tech.
